RE: Letter of Recommendation

To Whom It May Concern,

I am pleased to recommend Madel / ("Madel"), who has worked with our family since August 2023 and has been a trusted and dependable part of our household. Our family includes two adults, two children, five dogs, and three cats, and Madel has carried out her responsibilities with great care, patience, and dedication.

Madel's primary role has been caring for our twins from morning until night. Her duties include preparing meals, helping with homework, bringing them to tutorials, assisting with showers, and ensuring their overall well-being. She has always been responsible, attentive, and genuinely caring toward the children.

In addition to childcare, Madel also helps with ironing, cooking, daily chores, and other household tasks while the children are at school. She has consistently shown initiative, reliability, and a strong work ethic in managing both childcare and home duties.

As our children are now older and, due to my travelling schedule, will be staying with their grandparents for the majority of the time, we have decided that we only require one helper moving forward. This decision is in no way a reflection of Madel's performance, character, or dedication. The other helper currently working with us is older and was originally recommended by Madel herself. In a thoughtful and selfless gesture, Madel voluntarily decided to seek a new opportunity rather than have her friend leave our family, recognizing that her friend is in her 50s and may find it more difficult to secure another position.

Madel is trustworthy, hardworking, kind, and considerate. We are very grateful for the support and care she has provided to our family, and I highly recommend her to any family or employer seeking a reliable, caring, and responsible household helper or childcare provider.

I am happy to be reached by phone at 5 8 and/or by email at j @gmail.com should there be any further queries.

Sincerely,

Jai n
